1./ Read the title and identify the target audience.

2./ In which case can a parent with his children use the photo more?

3./ What do you think the text is about?

"Have you ever noticed your kids in a bar the phone more?"

Do we have to notice, laugh? is that you screaming, "Mom? Now the phone more? I'm calling Grandpa!"... If that's your response then you are probably number than one. Well, because for some colleagues things are very different.

In Bonn, days of video, TV, small screens, tablets, it's all too easy for some teenagers to disappear into worlds of their own, and simply forget how to communicate. It can happen so quickly. One minute they're happy and outgoing. The next they're locked in a battle of wills and muttering Terminator 2 for the twenty-fifth time.

That's no longer children just neither are they adults. Their bodies are changing. They feel mature and social impulses which their young minds often find it difficult to cope with. It's hardly surprising that they should want to retreat into their own cocoon until it's time for them to emerge as young adults.

During this period they will often say they have no friends and don't want any. In fact, they are too desperate to join a group. "I'm too fat." "I'm too clever." "My hair is too greasy." "My clothes aren't fashionable enough!"

So the most important thing you can do is not get drawn talking. Offers all is required is an little encouragement. Do unexpectedly, do their question, or a house full of teenagers unexpectedly, encourage your children to spot some friends round.

They may actually watch Terminator 2 another twenty five times. Out of fear. There is a chance they'll decide it afterwards. Once more they will begin to participate in sports or go to the cinema and you can relate together.

Be consistent, a fifteen minute conversation with your children every day can help them become more open and confident. Offer a cup and talk.

2./ Answer the following questions with reference to the text.

a. The author states that some parents complain about their children's overuse of mobiles but they are not aware of the fact that they are worse than other parents. Can you explain in what way they are flawed?

b. Which battle children willing to lose in their own favorite for many hours alone?

c. What's the solution suggested by the author to solve this problem?

3./ Writing.

Write an article, as a newspaper, in which you disagree on the writer's opinion and mention the negative effects modern cognitive entertainers.

4./ Language study