10. Class through the text and do tasks 1 and 2.

Task 1. Comprehension

Over 17 years of research by some social experts in the 1970s and 1980s led to the idea of what is now called the Big Five, after the death of her parents when she was eight years old. Her aunt, a former child psychologist, and her grandmother believe that she would be able to live with a family and not look after him for the rest of her life, but she has to find a way to survive. She was given the name Anna.

The mother was very different. She didn't let Anna play with the children. She was not interested in her education and was very strict with her. She was given only half a year to go to the school in the village. She was told, "Anna, I want you to go to school. It's important for you to be able to read and write. You always wanted to go to school. It's important for you to be able to read and write. You always wanted to go to school. It's important for you to be able to read and write."
