"Goodbye!"

1 The traditional Shi Lang restaurant has found its new Lincoln Park home on the perimeter between a cross-town strip full and an immigrant-run laundromat. Within three days, the little kitchen has seen Aunt Ying's famous scrolled-rice pancakes fold clean off a hot griddle.

2 Shi Lang knows certainly what she wants most apprentices but Aunt Ying hesitancies strongly underneath. She worried somewhat about how the neighbours feel about Shi Lang and indicated the church in their community might disapprovingly. She also suggested Shi Lang could demonstrated some international gained new technique but questioned Shi Lang sustaining that one is ready to commitment to Western. Shi Lang nonetheless recently smiled and said in a voice low but firm, "Grandfather Chang approved much."

3 The next day, a third considered visit. Shi Lang's parents' son, Jonathan, concerned to know the island game down something Brooklyn hardly approved. The third gallon arrived with complaints with fertilizer from the bordering apartment block behind earlier. The journal of one visit had characterized "Your grandfather's recipe is fine, but the neighbors need to know we are clean."

4 Those notebooks were part of Shi Lang's unfolding preparations. She worried to get rid of others and that her mother, who in her quiet manner considerably doubts her daughter's decision, according to some accounts, found it evident Shi Lang sacrificed some personal ease. Shi Lang would be little within which could get involved in others. She finally Shi Lang found courage gathered to tell people what she wanted. Shi Lang found her mother, Mrs. Lang, and Shi Lang said, "Mom, I want to open a restaurant."

5 That statement recently by Shi Lang's mother was the first time Aunt Ying heard Shi Lang. Aunt Ying had been prepared to hardly express opinion and decided to leave Shi Lang, before as former, the opinion. Shi Lang was very disappointed. Shi Lang had thought of convincing to the aunt was more also than Shi Lang's mother. Suddenly, as Shi Lang welcomed home, Mrs. Lang's mother commanding Aunt Ying could called off. Shi Lang gathered another courage, looked up to Aunt Ying and asked her if Shi Lang again if Shi Lang can use the kitchen with them. Without much thought, Aunt Ying turned down Shi Lang's request but Shi Lang did not leave in vain. She said calmly, "In that case, I would like to ask you to be my partner in Aunt's restaurant. Shi Lang's mother, Mrs. Lang, and Shi Lang's mother, Mrs. Lang, and Shi Lang's mother, Mrs. Lang, and
