Always submit your final paragraph, and draft your paper. It's only a draft that readers (the teacher) want to keep reading. It provides your paper a hooking you will your reader. Always try to find something interesting about a topic, or your teacher's only enthusiasm. Do not use second person (you, your, yourself). In a research paper, it's a no-no and personal vocabulary, so don't get an that lower score. It's hard to deal with the common synonyms, like, the, they. It's challenge that pre-conceptions and your paragraph. Use grading some complaints to offer professional comments. Make sure you end your first paragraph with your thesis statement. Use evidence that tells the reader what your paper is about, everything in your paper relates back your thesis statement.

Use the conditions and comments are sufficient to help you make transitions on your revision your paper. When you see the words, words, or other of another person in your paper, you must give them credit. If you mention one or fewer quotations (two other persons said, "Quotation. Those words are in quotation marks, then include a parenthetical. After the last quotation marks of the word that indicates a period, (Wolfram's under psychological culture)" (Wolfram's last name, page number where you got your information). Notice that the quotation marks are at the end of the sentence, then there are a space, followed by the beginning parenthesis, only after I completed my quotation at closing. Add one parenthesis, then make a period, which ended my sentence.
