

Weekly Short Form Lesson Plan

Dates	EALR/GLE	Objectives	Procedures	Assessment	Materials
Monday	EALR 1. CIVICS The student understands and applies knowledge of government, law, politics, and the nation's fundamental documents to make decisions about local, national, and international issues and to demonstrate thoughtful, participatory citizenship.	Students will read about Confucianism, Daoism, and Legalism in order to understand how different philosophies can affect how a government functions.	Short (10 min) mini-lecture on the term philosophy and how philosophies affect how a government works.  Students read from HA! for the remainder of class and complete a reading guide worksheet.	Students will be assessed on completion of the worksheet.  Students are also being continually assessed for understanding on an individual basis.	HA!, worksheet, iPods,
Tuesday	EALR 1. CIVICS The student understands and applies knowledge of government, law, politics, and the nation's fundamental documents to make decisions about local, national, and international issues and to demonstrate thoughtful, participatory citizenship.	Students will create skits that model the three philosophies in order to understand how different philosophies can affect how a government functions.	Short introduction on the skits  Maybe short discussion about Osama bin Laden  Students spend the remainder of class creating their skits.	Students will be assessed for being on task using a clip-board.	HA!, worksheet, iPods, scratch paper
Wednesday	EALR 1. CIVICS The student understands and applies knowledge of government, law, politics, and the nation's fundamental documents to make decisions about local, national, and international issues and to	Students will perform skits that model the three philosophies in order to understand how different philosophies can affect how a government functions.	Short introduction on classroom expectations.  Students will perform their skits in front of their classmates.  Their classmates will attempt to guess which philosophy is	Students will be assessed using the criteria on the worksheet.	Worksheets, any props, scripts