EDUCATION AT HOME

Almost [illegible] families are educating their children at home, and they are doing very well. One example is the Teasdale family from Hertfordshire. Mrs Teasdale, 37, gave her 10-year-old twins, Daniel (8) and Isabella (6), a lesson. The Teasdale children, accompanied (illegible) and eight-year-old Simon, study at home with their teacher. They have a bright, comfortable study in their house. All classrooms are free of books, and the children's paintings are on the wall. Daniel says, "Dad's Eros and I finish we get nothing. Mum called – well, a diploma. We learn fun at all subjects, everything we learning."

Some parents who are teaching their children at home have a study programme, but Mrs Teasdale does not. She says, "The Children's Knowledge – Experimental Code of Things. Well, of course, we read many books together. Geographical, reading and mathematics, etc. They never stopping. Lots fun too. Often they go shopping with me and pay for the things we buy."

She and Daniel take their children to the library, to museums, to concerts, to interesting people's public presentations. "Very hard, there is children are very imaginative," Mrs Teasdale, Daniel's Mrs says. "Half of them are very interested. Some friends are also thinking of the teaching their children at home."
