

Vignettes of China earthquake survivors

By the survivors themselves

Vignettes of recently rescued survivors of China's May 12 earthquake, whose heartfelt letters written in Chinese are below.

Wang Zhongshan, 46, a teacher and a former basketball player, was rescued after 118 hours after his apartment's collapse in Chengde. His wife was saved from a rubble in Tianjin, and at the earthquake-stricken school, the children turned their eyes to his father.

Wang Zhongshan, 46, a teacher and a former basketball player, was rescued after 118 hours after his apartment's collapse in Chengde. His wife was saved from a rubble in Tianjin, and at the earthquake-stricken school, the children turned their eyes to his father.

Wang Zhongshan, 46, a teacher and a former basketball player, was rescued after 118 hours after his apartment's collapse in Chengde. His wife was saved from a rubble in Tianjin, and at the earthquake-stricken school, the children turned their eyes to his father.

Wang Zhongshan, 46, a teacher and a former basketball player, was rescued after 118 hours after his apartment's collapse in Chengde. His wife was saved from a rubble in Tianjin, and at the earthquake-stricken school, the children turned their eyes to his father.

Wang Zhongshan, 46, a teacher and a former basketball player, was rescued after 118 hours after his apartment's collapse in Chengde. His wife was saved from a rubble in Tianjin, and at the earthquake-stricken school, the children turned their eyes to his father.

Wang Zhongshan, 46, a teacher and a former basketball player, was rescued after 118 hours after his apartment's collapse in Chengde. His wife was saved from a rubble in Tianjin, and at the earthquake-stricken school, the children turned their eyes to his father.

Wang Zhongshan, 46, a teacher and a former basketball player, was rescued after 118 hours after his apartment's collapse in Chengde. His wife was saved from a rubble in Tianjin, and at the earthquake-stricken school, the children turned their eyes to his father.

Wang Zhongshan, 46, a teacher and a former basketball player, was rescued after 118 hours after his apartment's collapse in Chengde. His wife was saved from a rubble in Tianjin, and at the earthquake-stricken school, the children turned their eyes to his father.
