Directions: Write a paragraph about a topic in which you have some knowledge and interest. Follow rules for paragraphs.

Paragraphs are groups of sentences organized around a common topic. A paragraph should have a topic sentence, which grabs the reader's attention, supporting details that provide facts, descriptions, and examples of the topic sentence, and a concluding sentence, which drives the final point home. A good paragraph contains transitional words that unify the sentences and create flow.

Paragraphs come in three types: narrative (tell about an event), descriptive (vividly describes one subject), and expository (provide information).
