

QUIZ: CONFLICT

Directions: Read each of the following examples in the book, write the type of conflict each represents. Your choices are:

- Character vs. character
- Character vs. society
- Character vs. self
- Character vs. nature

1. You're in a clothing store and your friend is asking you to purchase a top. You like it, but she seems to insist on a different one. It's getting late and you're hungry. What's your choice? (type the conflict in the space below, when you're done, write "I chose clothing for myself")

2. You have a bad cold, you're in a bad mood, every body's right, but come, though you intend it otherwise as a friendly commitment, this causes a friend to behave in a certain good way.

3. You're in a clothing store and your friend is asking you to purchase a top. You like it, but she seems to insist on a different one. It's getting late and you're hungry. What's your choice? (type the conflict in the space below, when you're done, write "I chose clothing for myself")

4. You're in a clothing store and your friend is asking you to purchase a top. You like it, but she seems to insist on a different one. It's getting late and you're hungry. What's your choice? (type the conflict in the space below, when you're done, write "I chose clothing for myself")

5. As a girl, you're in a clothing store and your friend is asking you to purchase a top. You like it, but she seems to insist on a different one. It's getting late and you're hungry. What's your choice? (type the conflict in the space below, when you're done, write "I chose clothing for myself")

6. You're in a clothing store and your friend is asking you to purchase a top. You like it, but she seems to insist on a different one. It's getting late and you're hungry. What's your choice? (type the conflict in the space below, when you're done, write "I chose clothing for myself")

7. You're in a clothing store and your friend is asking you to purchase a top. You like it, but she seems to insist on a different one. It's getting late and you're hungry. What's your choice? (type the conflict in the space below, when you're done, write "I chose clothing for myself")
