

My Emotional Emergency Kit

Check off the items you think would become useful items when you feel overwhelmed by emotions. Add additional items at the bottom of this page.

A "grounding" object such as a small photograph

Just experiencing the object, and paying attention to your physical reactions, can help calm your sensations.

A small object you can touch

This can provide a sense of touch, provide color and emotional support. Doesn't need to be anything special, just something you like. If you have a favorite toy or security item, this can also automatically call on the positive emotions it evokes for support.

An alternative media store your feelings or interests and ideals

You can do this through art, film, television, music, writing, or journaling.

Positive photographs

Include few photographs of pleasant memories. These could be people you like, or special places. Include a few pictures that stimulate positive feelings and/or memories.

Music

Listening to music with lyrics that have an affirmative effect on your mood. Happy songs, dance tunes, and/or "mellow" affirming music.

Bookshelf reading

Motivational books about healing, growth, progress, or personal development.

Positive affirmations

Please don't underestimate the power of positive affirmations to make you feel better. There are scores of websites that are designed for affirmations and more. Remember what you learned when you were a child - affirmations work.

Smelling good

Aromatherapy experts find smelling good has a calming effect on the body because negative emotions produce hormones.

Surrounding nature

There are hundreds of guided imagery recordings you can download for your relaxation or stress, as well as progressive muscle, and other forms of music therapy that give listeners their power to recharge, or energize and remind you of the difficult times in your life.

Copyright 2010 © BarbaraTherapeutic.com