People have always called me names because I'm got long and hair with freckles! They call me 'Carrot Head' and things like that. I suppose it's because we freckles are different. But I  my hair.

I don't usually do anything when people call me names. Just ignore it.

But a few weeks ago I was with  and someone started, 'Oh,  Head! It was her girl's and a boy that go to my  school.' I told them they  were stupid and moved away, but they started me. I asked, they didn't call me because I was fat and ugly?

When I got home to my bedroom and my brother said they'd say, 'I wonder?'  They called me and called me names. And it was the same every day after that. It was terrible. Then one day when I came out of school, they were waiting for me. They pushed me up, and pulled my hair. Then my  fell off. When I went down to pick them up, one of the girls pushed me another  and kicked me. I showed and screamed! They ran away.

When I got home I started . I told my mum all about it and she showed the police. They came round to talk to  me. They said 'want to be called' because and told to see police.

I was really worried for a few weeks after that. I often saw the kids who did it at school but hardly they just left me alone. I'm glad I told you about it. It was long to be present and don't say anything. But I hope you'll get help on.

- The school people do everything possible to help
- It isn't good to be with children. Call your school, too
- Don't keep bullying yourself physical, which means bullying is usually 14/16. But never let them just go on as being pushed or pulled
- It is not effective because children often they grow up
- They just show you young people continue with because they are different or weird
