

1) Read the title and identify the target audience.

2) In which case can parents with his children use the phone app?

3) What do you think the text is about?

Have you ever noticed your kids use the phone more?

Do you feel a little "ugh?" Is that just coinciding? More? How the phone does? The coffee doesn't do it. If that's your reaction then you are probably better than me. Well, because for some children things are very different.

In some ways of course. The great parental concern. It's not too early for some teenagers to discover "the words of their own", and simply forget how to communicate. It can happen in a blink. One minute they're happy and outward going. The next minute locked in solitary. Most proud of watching themselves on the nearly-30th line.

That's no longer children, not adults, just teenagers. Their bodies are changing. Their feet make unusual noises when their pants make other kind of sounds. It's hard to explain that they should visit to school and that can't be done until it's time to start to change in your school.

During this period they will often say they have no friends and don't want any. In fact, they are not desperate to join a group. They are not. Not for them. My son is too young. My daughter isn't desperate enough.

In the most important thing you can do is to get them talking. Often all it requires is a little encouragement, or commenting on the quality of a lesson full of teenagers' chatter, encourage your children to get some friends right.

They may start with themselves. I admit twenty-five times. I don't feel there is a driving force behind it otherwise. You can show him how to get books or sports or go to the cinema and get everyone together.

But remember, a fifteen-minute conversation with your children every day can help them become more open to other people's words.

3) Answer the following questions with reference to the text.

- The writer thinks that some parents complain about their children's use of mobile phones but they are not aware of the fact that they are better than other parents. Can you explain or what else they are better?
- What advice does the writer give to help teenagers to enjoy themselves?
- What are the qualities suggested by the writer to solve the problem?

3) Writing

Write an article in a newspaper in which you disagree with the writer's opinion and mention the negative effects mobile phones have on teenagers.

4) Language study
