

1) Read the title and identify the target audience.

2) In which case can parents with his children use the phone more?

3) What do you think the text is about?

Have you ever noticed your kids use the phone more?

Do you feel a little "ugh?" Is that just coinciding? More? How the phone does? The coffee doesn't do it. If that's your reaction then you are probably better than one. Well, because for some children things are very different.

In some ways of course. The great parental stress. It's not too easy to give teenagers to discuss it in words of their own, but simply forget how to communicate. It can happen in family. One catches them happy and outward going. The next minute locked in solitary. Most proud in watching television 2 for the nearly 24h day.

That's no longer children, not adults, just teenagers. Their bodies are changing. Their feet make unusual noises when their pants make other kind of sounds to cope with. It's hard watching that they should want to spend you. They can't control and it's hard to watch to change in yourself.

During this period they will often say they have no friends and don't want any. In fact, they are not desperate to join a group. They are just, like the others. My son is his group. My daughter isn't desperate enough.

In the most important thing you can do is to get them talking. Often all it requires is a little encouragement, or commenting on the quality of a music bit of teenage music, encourage your children to get some friends right.

They may start with television 2 another twenty-five times. But at least there is a shared space. Start a conversation. You can show him how to get books or sports or go to the cinema and get someone together.

But remember, a fifteen-minute conversation with your children every day can help them become more open to other people's words.

3) Answer the following questions with reference to the text.

- The writer thinks that some parents complain about their children's use of mobile but they are not aware of the fact that they are better than other parents. Can you explain or what else they are better?
- What advice does the writer give to help teenagers to enjoy themselves?
- What are the qualities suggested by the writer to make the parents?

4) Writing

Write an article in a newspaper in which you disagree of the writer's opinion and mention the negative effects mobile phones have on teenagers.
