

Named for the thorn trees under which the preschool children meet, the project has boosted the number of children attending primary school in the region from 132 in 2001 to 651 in 2008.