In today's "Global Community" it is ever more important that human beings, as a species, solve problems that not only affect people in their immediate communities, but also solve those problems which affect the nation as a whole. As Kate Brown, Tom Clancy's book ^{Red Heat} said "Together we can improve the things in which we live in but divided we shall be destroyed." The most obvious example of the benefits of a united nation solving problems together is China. Similarly philanthropist Bill Gates also believes in solving problems of the United States.

When people hear the words "People's Republic of China" they think Tian an men
