

CONCLUDING SENTENCE

After summarizing the story that we are putting together together, we don't have to use any of the words from the introduction to conclude the document again.

Directions: Read the story and put your own concluding paragraph. The child has summarized. Encourage the student to read, who reads the paragraph the child has read and then summarize together in one sentence. Encourage the child to include all the words that you introduced into the story by using them at the beginning of each sentence. There is one fact the child needs for each paragraph. At the end of the child's sentence, write a sentence that includes all the words from the story.
