

Tell Him and the Bunch

...after the wedding

The bridegroom and the bride, and the guests, were all very merry. They were all very merry, and they were all very merry. They were all very merry, and they were all very merry. They were all very merry, and they were all very merry.

The bridegroom, talking and smiling, begged the bride to dance. "Please don't say no," she begged, "I shall be so glad to dance with you." "I shall be so glad to dance with you," she said, "I shall be so glad to dance with you."

The bridegroom, talking and smiling, begged the bride to dance. "Please don't say no," she begged, "I shall be so glad to dance with you." "I shall be so glad to dance with you," she said, "I shall be so glad to dance with you."

"Thank you, my darling," replied the bride, smiling brightly at him. "I shall be so glad to dance with you."

As the bride and the bridegroom danced, the guests were all very merry. They were all very merry, and they were all very merry. They were all very merry, and they were all very merry.

The bridegroom, talking and smiling, begged the bride to dance. "Please don't say no," she begged, "I shall be so glad to dance with you." "I shall be so glad to dance with you," she said, "I shall be so glad to dance with you."

"Thank you, my darling," replied the bride, smiling brightly at him. "I shall be so glad to dance with you."

"I shall be so glad to dance with you," she said, "I shall be so glad to dance with you."

The bride and the bridegroom danced, and the guests were all very merry.