

Learning with Qualitative Methods

Directions: Read the following scenarios for several qualitative methods, including their strengths and limitations, and identify any missing parts. Then, provide your answers to the items below.

1. Scenario: A researcher is interested in understanding the experiences of young adults who have recently moved to a new city. She plans to conduct in-depth interviews with 15 participants. She will use a semi-structured interview guide to explore their experiences and challenges. She will also use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges. She will use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges. She will use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges.

2. Scenario: A researcher is interested in understanding the experiences of young adults who have recently moved to a new city. She plans to conduct in-depth interviews with 15 participants. She will use a semi-structured interview guide to explore their experiences and challenges. She will also use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges. She will use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges. She will use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges.

3. Scenario: A researcher is interested in understanding the experiences of young adults who have recently moved to a new city. She plans to conduct in-depth interviews with 15 participants. She will use a semi-structured interview guide to explore their experiences and challenges. She will also use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges. She will use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges. She will use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges.

4. Scenario: A researcher is interested in understanding the experiences of young adults who have recently moved to a new city. She plans to conduct in-depth interviews with 15 participants. She will use a semi-structured interview guide to explore their experiences and challenges. She will also use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges. She will use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges. She will use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges.

5. Scenario: A researcher is interested in understanding the experiences of young adults who have recently moved to a new city. She plans to conduct in-depth interviews with 15 participants. She will use a semi-structured interview guide to explore their experiences and challenges. She will also use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges. She will use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges. She will use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges.

6. Scenario: A researcher is interested in understanding the experiences of young adults who have recently moved to a new city. She plans to conduct in-depth interviews with 15 participants. She will use a semi-structured interview guide to explore their experiences and challenges. She will also use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges. She will use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges. She will use a focus group to explore their experiences and challenges.
