

- Taking on all responsibilities at the office
- Being overwhelmed by a sense of guilt
- Acting on the first come basis
- Being easier for your partner, not yourself
- Being afraid personal values or rights to protect another person
- Putting in time with someone who makes you feel bad
- Putting in time with a new acquaintance
- Accepting bad gifts, looks, and feel you don't worth
- Taking care of others all the time if you
- Emotional physical abuse
- Physical abuse

SIGNS OF HEALTHY BOUNDARIES

- Appropriate touch
- Saying no to what you don't want
- Saying no to your own goals and interests
- Maintaining several intact friends who share your values
- Having clear personal needs and boundaries
- Saying "No" to gifts, gifts, looks, and feel you don't worth
- Knowing a limit of yourself at a time, then sticking to it and have the other person respect to your limits
- Putting a new acquaintance on hold until you know her completely
- Taking care of yourself
- Having your own decisions
- Defining your goals, as you see fit
- Keeping who you are and what you want
- Maintaining your own living space
- Talking to yourself with confidence, humor, love, and respect
- Saying no others - not taking advantage of someone's generosity
- Self-respect - not going too high or too low for anyone else
- Not allowing someone to take advantage of you