

Types of CONDITIONAL SENTENCES

Types

- The future situation in the main clause and the future situation in the conditional clause
- The future situation in the main clause and a conditional sentence "if" situation

1. 0th conditional

This is used to talk about something someone will happen if the condition is satisfied

if + subject + verb in present tense ... condition + will + verb in future

if + subject + verb in present tense ... have to/should/must/ought + verb

- if I get up early tomorrow I will be very happy

- if you don't hurry you will miss the train

2. 1st conditional

This is used to talk about something someone is going to do if + subject + verb in present tense ... subject + will/could/might/should + verb

condition

- if I see you I will talk to you

3. 2nd conditional

This is used to talk about something contrary to the facts in the present

if + subject + had + past participle ... subject + would/could/might/should + have + past

participle

- if my husband had married a girl, he would have been a doctor

4. 3rd conditional

This is used to talk about something that could have happened if the subject and the condition were different in the past (past perfect in the main clause)

if + subject + had + past participle, subject + would/could/might/should + have + past

participle

- if I had not been so busy, I would have been here

- if I had not the money, I would have been a doctor