This morning, I was waiting for the bus and a guy came up to me.

Bryan: "Hello, excuse me, I think I know you. You are Carolina's sister, aren't you?"

Anabelle: Yes, I am. But where did we meet?

Bryan: We didn't actually meet. But she often talks about you and you look a lot like her.

Anabelle: Yes we are twins.

Bryan: You study Portuguese at the university, don't you?

Anabelle: That's it. And you? What do you study?

Bryan: Oh, I'm not a student anymore. I work in a hospital, I'm a doctor now.

Anabelle: Wow, it must be exciting to save lives!

Bryan: Yes I love my job... Carolina told me you went to Brazil last summer. How was your trip?

Anabelle: Well, it was absolutely divine! I met a lot of people there; they were all so nice to me. It's such a beautiful country, isn't it?

Bryan: I have never been there. But I plan to go to the state of Bahia in June. I've heard of an Island called "Morrow de San Paulow", I have been told it is a little paradise.

Anabelle: Haha! Yes I have heard of it.

Bryan: Why are you laughing?

Anabelle: It's the way you pronounce it. It is not "Morrow de San Paulow", it is "Morro de São Paulo".

Bryan: Haha, I get it now. I think I can learn a bit from you before I go. You have been to Brazil twice now, haven't you?

Anabelle: Sorry for laughing and yes I have. I can't wait to go back.

Bryan: I can't wait for my own trip. I have a question for you about the travel arrangements, if you wouldn't mind. I can't fly directly to Brazil from here, can I?

Anabelle: I had a direct flight, so it is possible. If I were you I would fly with KLM though, they are the cheapest airline I could find.

Bryan: Thanks for the advice.

Anabelle: No problem, I'm glad to help. Here comes my bus! Well it was nice meeting you. What is your name by the way? I'm Anabelle.

Bryan: I'm Bryan. It was nice meeting you too; send my greetings to your sister. Bye!

Anabelle: I will, bye!
