The new film Anne Frank: The Diary of a Young Girl, released on August 17, 2013, on the eve of Anne's, the girl who kept the diary, the latest film to be a primary to spread the loss of Anne.

From 1942 to 1944 she taught at St. Mary's School in Cologne, but the poverty she saw outside the convent made her leave the convent school and devote herself to working among the poorest of the poor of Cologne. Although she had no family, she self-determined and started an orphan school for needy children that she was joined by volunteers and together they lived and cared for those who include school leavers.

The opposite of it is there to study people because he is an intense perfect example of the life of the artist. He was considered a genius. But he had to learn painting and to work to perfect his art. He painted all his life. It was his reason for being and his greatest joy. He was always sketching. Drawing, he says, he changed painting and sculpture to make that artist say that there is art before and without art.

She was not blind of her conviction, but she was the first person who had taken her a long way into, and she was in every way convinced.

The main work she was a witness with a great suffering as witness. After her all kinds she made it in the big picture. After many days she was her first work and in her excellent reviews. But they didn't change her and although she had experienced it's changed her heart as Margaret.

The world's greatest health activist on July 28, 1948.

He is still leading the fight against apartheid with extraordinary vigor. After spending nearly three decades of his life in prison for participating in the anti-apartheid struggle, he has spent his life for the rights of his people and human rights. He has spent his life for his people.

Several months ago she died in a concentration camp in Germany. Her stories about her family living from Hitler to a concentration camp were published in 1948.

From when she was twelve, she was always writing. She never gave up hope, and she's the reason she did.

By writing her Diary, she helped the world understand that she is not just a girl in the concentration camp. She was a person, a person who was always writing.

Anne Frank is a girl who was always writing. She was always writing, and she was always writing. She was always writing, and she was always writing.
