

Cardigan's New Shoes

"I need shoes," said Cardigan. "My feet are sore." I went to the shoe shop. "Cardigan shoes, please," I said.

"Here you are," said the salesman.

Cardigan put them on. "They're comfy," I said. "I'd bought some shoes."

"Sure!" said the salesman. "Here are some nice shoes. How about that?"

"I really wanted blue," said Cardigan. I put on the red shoes instead. "I still need more," I said.

"I have red, blue and green," said the man. "How about green?"

"I really wanted red," said Cardigan. I put on the green shoes saying, "Thank you!" I said.

Just then, Cardigan's friend came by. "I love your shoes," I said. "Red, blue and green!" I went home with my shoes. How wonderful Cardigan!

"Yes, I love them!" said Cardigan.

Write "True" if the statement is wrong and "False" if the statement is right in the blank.

1. The cardigan needed shoes. _____
2. The salesman's feet were sore. _____
3. The cardigan went to a supermarket. _____
4. First, the salesman gave the cardigan red shoes. _____
5. Second, the salesman gave the cardigan blue shoes. _____
6. The salesman had green shoes. _____
7. The cardigan got the green shoes on. _____
8. The cardigan thanked me. _____
9. The cardigan thanked me for the shoes. _____
10. The cardigan thanked me for the cardigan's. _____

Put these sentences in order.

- a. Cardigan tried the green shoes. _____
- b. Cardigan went to the shoe shop. _____
- c. I had a nice shoe. _____
- d. Cardigan thanked me that he liked shoes so much. _____
- e. Cardigan wanted more red shoes. _____
- f. Cardigan's feet were sore. _____