

Cardigan's New Shoes

"I need shoes," said Cardigan. "My feet are sore." He went to the shoe shop. "These blue shoes, please," it said.

"Here you are," said the salesman.

Cardigan put them on. "They're comfy," it said. "Let's check some more."

"Sure!" said the salesman. "Here are some blue shoes. How about that?"

"I really wanted blue," said Cardigan. It put on the red shoes instead. "I still need more," it said.

"I have red, blue and green," said the shop. "How about green?"

"I really wanted red," said Cardigan. It put on the green shoes saying, "Thank you!" it said.

Just then, Cardigan's friend came by. "I love your shoes," it said. "Red, blue and green? You wear some pretty nice. How are these?" Cardigan?

"Yes, I love them!" said Cardigan.

Write "True" if the statement is wrong and "False" if the statement is right in the blank.

1. The cardigan needed shoes. _____
2. The salesman's feet were sore. _____
3. The cardigan went to a supermarket. _____
4. First, the salesman gave the cardigan red shoes. _____
5. Second, the salesman gave the cardigan blue shoes. _____
6. The salesman had green shoes. _____
7. The cardigan got the green shoes on. _____
8. The cardigan thanked the _____ _____
9. The cardigan's friend asked her the shoes. _____
10. The cardigan's friend asked about the cardigan's _____

Put these sentences in order.

- a. Cardigan tried the green shoes. _____
- b. Cardigan went to the shoe shop. _____
- c. It needed blue shoes. _____
- d. Cardigan thanked that its shoes fit good in fact! _____
- e. Cardigan wanted more red shoes. _____
- f. Cardigan's feet were sore. _____