

Name: _____

Barter System

Have you ever traded something with a friend? Maybe you gave your friend a cool baseball card, and your friend gave you a new Lego mini figure. For a very long time, before currency began to be used, people traded goods and services for other goods and services. This is called bartering.

Bartering still goes on today. Bartering can be tricky. Both parties have to agree that the items or services being traded are equitable, fair.

Directions: Write about goods for which you might enter into a barter with another person. Also, write about services that you could perform in exchange for another service.

A good I want to barter:

An item that would be a fair trade:

Why I believe these two goods are equitable:

A good I want to barter:

An item that would be a fair trade:

Why I believe these two goods are equitable:

A service I want to barter:

An act that would be a fair trade:

Why I believe these two services are equitable:

A service I want to barter:

An act that would be a fair trade:

Why I believe these two services are equitable:
