Wilbur Wright and Orville Wright Rosemary and Stephen Vincent Benet
Said Orville Wright to Wilbur Wright "These birds are very trying. I'm sick of hearing them cheep-cheep About the fun of flying. A bird has feathers, it is true. That much I freely grant. But, must that stop us, W?" Said Wilbur Wright, "It shan't."		They glided here, they glided there, They sometimes skinned their noses. ---For learning how to rule the air Was not a bed of roses--- But each would murmur, afterward, While patching up his bro, "Are we discouraged, W?" "Of course we are not, O!"
And so they built a glider, first, And then they built another. --- There never were two brothers more Devoted to each other. They ran a dusty little shop For bicycle-repairing, And bought each other soda-pop And praised each other's daring.	And finally, at Kitty Hawk In Nineteen-Three (let's cheer it!) The first real airplane really flew With Orville there to steer it! ---And kingdoms may forget their kings And dogs forget their bites, But, not till Man forgets his wings, Will men forget the Wrights.
