Age: 15

Summary

It's late November and people start talking about Christmas. They get together that about half of the class will spend their Christmas holidays at home. They travel to another area nearby.

The teacher knows the students have been talking about Christmas. They find they are familiar with the students' vocabulary and the language that is necessary to talk about that time of the year.

Real life connections

This task is done to help the students know that their people decide to spend the winter holiday period because of the strong light offered by adults such as "I see you that a lot of people in this class have already talked about it with their parents or friends. There are other people who have done it already or will do it."

Goals

Students should be able to take part in a discussion successfully.

They should get excited or have to respond to their arguments.

They should perform to their best of all abilities.

They should be able to integrate their own ideas and reports in specific form.

Reflect questions

How was the role performed?

Which arguments were most convincing?

How was the language used?
