

Sentence-building

Simple sentences can be made longer by adding clauses. A compound sentence consists of two or more clauses of equal importance. A complex sentence consists of one or more main clauses and another clause that needs the others to make complete sense.

Jack heard a strange noise. (simple sentence - one clause)

Jack heard a strange noise, and we were scared. (compound sentence - two simple sentences joined by and to make two equally important clauses)

Jack heard a strange noise, and we were scared when he told us about it. (complex sentence - there is a third clause, which needs the others to make complete sense.)

Build these simple sentences into compound sentences by adding a clause of equal importance. The first one has been done for you.

Remember: A clause is a group of words that includes a verb.

The dog barked.

The dog barked but we didn't hear anything.

The rain fell.

She ran across the park.

The computer crashed.

Now build your compound sentences into complex sentences by adding another clause.

The dog barked but we didn't hear anything because the television was too loud.
