

Post-Test
WRITTEN

Identify the type of irony in each sentence. Write the type of irony in the space provided.

1. The school principal wanted to give the students a surprise by announcing that the school was closed for the day. The students were so excited that they thought the school was closed for good. (Situational Irony)

2. The school principal wanted to give the students a surprise by announcing that the school was closed for the day. The students were so excited that they thought the school was closed for good. (Situational Irony)

3. The school principal wanted to give the students a surprise by announcing that the school was closed for the day. The students were so excited that they thought the school was closed for good. (Situational Irony)

4. The school principal wanted to give the students a surprise by announcing that the school was closed for the day. The students were so excited that they thought the school was closed for good. (Situational Irony)

5. The school principal wanted to give the students a surprise by announcing that the school was closed for the day. The students were so excited that they thought the school was closed for good. (Situational Irony)

6. The school principal wanted to give the students a surprise by announcing that the school was closed for the day. The students were so excited that they thought the school was closed for good. (Situational Irony)
