

Name _____ Date _____ Period _____

Notes about Fall & Follow

When we read a story, we don't remember every detail every time, do we?
Can you imagine trying to recall a story after just hearing it once? How would you remember all of the important stuff that happens?

People that write books often have some special tricks that they used to help them remember key events and give the listener a way to give it to.

Repetition

- Repetition is repeating a detail about an event or having similar events happen over again.
- The more something was repeated, the easier it was to remember that part of the story.
- List some examples of repetition used in the story it is from below:

1. _____

2. _____

3. _____

Visual and Verbal

- People tend to remember details that are spoken or acted?
- Authors often include many fun things happening in the story using dialogue or problems in a story to make people not all reading that way.
- List some examples of every day problems in the story:

1. _____

2. _____