Revised by a Teacher

A general army (defeated in battle) and their wives live in poverty...and they constantly tell their children to be satisfied, because "there is..." That night, an Englishman comes to visit them in the month of December.

On the morning, two soldiers come into the house to carry out their mission. They say that now they will give them money to buy food.

The soldier said, "I think they are homeless."

"We cannot live in houses," replied the soldier. "Please help us because the winter is cold and the house is broken down by the continuous rainfall this year."

(In the afternoon, when they came back again, they found that there was much more than they expected.)
