

Children should walk to school.

Children should be encouraged to walk to school. The environment, children's health and general safety are too important to ignore. Why should people drive when they have two legs to walk on? Since children spend so much time in a car on the weekend it is only fair that children should walk to school.

Finally, let us think about the importance of walking on the environment. Good people that I have spoken to agree that there are too many cars on the road. Cars release gases into the air and cause pollution, this causes damage to the environment and people's health. Although cars are necessary for children who live far away from school, I still believe that the majority of children should walk to school.

Generally, walking to school has many health benefits for children and their parents. Children in this day and age spend a lot of time inside during their spare time and many people suggest that children don't do enough exercise. Experts suggest that a great form of exercise is walking as it is available for everyone to do. Children should therefore start walking to school more often.

To conclude, I feel that it is vital for children to walk to school. If children are able to walk then they should definitely start today!