

Indians tassel princess satin

The Indians thought that the corn plant was once a prince.

They believed that he came to earth to help them.

The tassel was the feather of his cap.

The silk was his golden hair.

The leaves made his green dress.

Corn is even beautiful enough to be a princess.

Have you seen the long slender leaves shining like satin in the sun?

Perhaps the tassel was the feather in a prince's cap.

But what is it now?