

Interview – advantages and disadvantages

I conducted the semi-structured interviews. Therefore, I could be more strategic in how I asked the questions to elicit the most useful and relevant data. Interviewing can be useful to gain information and insights, which is why it is used by people who prefer watching TV for information and entertainment. I suggest conducting interviews, as they can be used to gather data that can be used to improve TV content and programming. Watching TV can be very useful. There are a lot of programs with high content of educational value that can be used to improve TV content. There are also programs that can be used to improve TV content. There are also programs that can be used to improve TV content. There are also programs that can be used to improve TV content. There are also programs that can be used to improve TV content. There are also programs that can be used to improve TV content. There are also programs that can be used to improve TV content. There are also programs that can be used to improve TV content. There are also programs that can be used to improve TV content. There are also programs that can be used to improve TV content. There are also programs that can be used to improve TV content. There are also programs that can be used to improve TV content.

In conclusion, I think that the advantages of watching TV are more than the disadvantages and that watching TV is a positive experience.

Whether this influence is positive or negative

- a) How often do you watch TV?
- b) How do you feel about watching TV?
- c) How do you feel about watching TV?
- d) How do you feel about watching TV?