

Writing:

Tips on Studying & Test-Taking

Writing is a process that requires careful attention. It takes time to write well. This can mean writing, making mistakes, correcting mistakes, and re-writing.

- The best way to learn writing is to practice everyday and read as much as possible in order to learn by example. Write in your own words about what you know, what you've read or what you think about different topics. Write in a journal. Write to a friend.
- After your instructor marks your writing, learn from your mistakes. Pay attention to the kinds of mistakes you make, so you won't make them again. For example, if it is a spelling mistake, use a dictionary to correct it, and then add the word to your new vocabulary list. Review the list often to help you remember new words.
- Go to the Learning Centre and study books and handouts on writing.
- Plan your writing. Limit your topic. Focus on one idea. Use an outline.
- Use a checklist from your instructor or tutor and read your writing aloud to check for mistakes. A checklist will remind you of common mistakes to look for: grammar, punctuation, spelling, organization, and others.

Before the test:

- Find out about the test format (length, kind of writing, passing mark) from your instructor before the final exam.
- Practice writing under test conditions.

During the test:

- Take a deep breath. Calm yourself before the test begins.
- Plan your time. For example, if it is a 1-hour test, plan 5 minutes for pre-writing, 45 minutes for writing, and 10 minutes for checking.
- If possible, choose to write about what you know best.
- Think about your topic by free writing, brainstorming, or mapping related ideas. Limit the topic and decide on one strong idea. Stick to your choice.
- Write a clear topic sentence for a paragraph, or a clear thesis statement for an essay which explains what will follow. Outline at least 3 major points to support your controlling idea. Add some examples that help explain or describe your points.
- Write double-spaced on a new page. Leave room for making changes and corrections.
- Print or write clearly. Use upper-case and lower-case letters.
- Vary your sentences and vocabulary. Make your points clear. Connect your ideas.
- Finish with a conclusion.
- Take the last ten minutes to proofread for mistakes and make any changes. Read quietly to yourself to find mistakes.
