Lately, you've had your eyes on a video game that just came out. The only problem is that the video game costs fifty dollars! Today, your mother gives you five dollars to go to the grocery store to get some candy. You bike down to the market and pick out some gummy bears. After you pay the clerk at the store for the candy, he gives you back a couple bills and some change. When you get outside of the store, you realize that the clerk accidentally gave you a fifty dollar bill! That is enough money to buy the video game, but it is also not your money. Should you keep it and buy the new video game, or give it back to the clerk? How would you feel in this situation? Have you ever been in a similar situation?
