

Punctuate these sentences using semicolons and commas.

My head stopped hurting all pain had disappeared I felt relieved.

In a last desperate act I ran for the door and pushed it as hard as I could suddenly I was free.

Drying my eyes I looked out the window there in the distance I could see the soldiers speeding towards me.

I turned to leave the house for the last time I had spent many happy years there so I was reluctant to go.

The brown leather of the boots scratched at my hands as I tried to pull them off the boots no longer felt comfortable and warm.

Answers

My head stopped hurting; all pain had disappeared; I felt relieved.

In a last desperate act, I ran for the door and pushed it as hard as I could; suddenly I was free.

Drying my eyes, I looked out the window; there in the distance I could see the soldiers speeding towards me.

I turned to leave the house for the last time; I had spent many happy years there, so I was reluctant to go.

The brown leather of the boots scratched at my hands as I tried to pull them off; the boots no longer felt comfortable and warm.