

Giraffe

Small group of giraffes run across the grasslands on their long, slender legs. They are the tallest animals in the world. Giraffes are not afraid of many animals, but they have to keep an eye out for hungry lions.

Giraffe has two bony horns on its head.

Thick eyelashes protect a giraffe's eyes from wind and dust. A baby giraffe takes shelter between its mother's legs. Here, it feels snug and safe.

A giraffe can wrap its extremely long tongue right round its head. It can even clean behind its ears with it.
