

BEHAVIOR CONTRACT

In order to establish a three-way communication/support system between the student, parent, and teacher, each member of the group needs a set of responsibilities and expectations. The following is an outline that --when met by each member-- will reinforce the communication/support system and ultimately benefit each member.

The student will follow the "Class Rights & Responsibilities" and therefore will:

1. Give and receive respect.
2. Actively listen to others and be listened to.
3. Be able to learn as well as allowing others to learn.
4. Be safe and act in a safe way.
5. Make friends and treat others as they would want to be treated.

The parent will:

1. Ask the student to relate daily school experiences.
2. Acknowledge rewards and encourage positive behavior.
3. Acknowledge the behavior forms or notes that are sent home by discussing them with the student and signing them. It is the student's responsibility to return the behavior form the next day.

1. individual learning style.
2. Encourage behavior that is in the best interest of the students.
3. Make parents aware of positive behaviors.
4. Make parents aware of inappropriate behaviors.

I understand the importance of a consistent behavior plan and know that for the plan to be consistent, each member (teacher, parent, student) must support the plan. I have read the "Class Rights & Responsibilities", which explains the classroom rewards and consequences, and the "Behavior Contract". I understand the responsibilities of all members and will do my best to maintain my part of the behavior contract.
