

Animal
General classification Which group of animals does it belong to?
Appearance What does it look like?
Habitat Where does it live?
Size What does it eat?
Movement How does it move?
Reproduction How does it reproduce?

- male sea horses carry the eggs.
- Seahorses are a type of fish.
- They swim upright.
- The female deposits up to 1,500 eggs into the males pouch.
- They use fins behind their ears to swim.
- They are poor swimmers and often get carried away with the current.
- Seahorses feed on small animals.
- Seahorses like shallow, warm tropical water.
- They have a long snout to suck up food.
- They use their long tail to hold onto seaweed when resting.
- They like to eat small shrimp.
- Seahorses can be found all over the world in seagrass beds, coral reefs, or mangroves.
- They also like to eat small fish and plankton.
- When the babies are born they are on their own. Their parents no longer look after them.
- There are over 40 kinds of seahorses.