Romulus and Remus

Rachel #6 Sept. 24, 2012

Romulus and Remus were twin brothers. When they were born, their dad, Mars, made a promise to them. He said that one day, they would start a awsome empire. Their jelous uncle, took the children, put them in a basket, and chucked them into the river. Those little turkeys were lucky! They soon tumbled out of the basket before they drownded. They were suprised to see a mother wolf above them! She gave them milk and took care of them until a sheapered found them and treated them like his own. When they got older, they were planing to build a city by the river where the wolf had found them. They soon got into a fight to the deth! Romulus won and Remus died. The city was called Rome (after Romulus). He ruled Rome for lots of years. One night in a storm, Romulus disapierd. They belive he went to be a god with Mars.
