

Food groups

Food groups are the different types of food that we eat. They are divided into five main groups: fruits and vegetables, grains, proteins, dairy products, and oils and fats. Each group provides different nutrients that are essential for our health.