

Week 4 (20)

Theme and Research Family Life

Chapter 10 tells the stories of six diverse families. Using at least two families as case studies, what would you do to work with these families from a strength-based perspective? Answer the following questions in your response.

- What would be your first goal with the families?
- What strengths do you see in the two families?
- How would you acknowledge the families' strengths?

Respond to at least two of your classmates' postings.

Using two of the families as case studies, what would you do to work with these families from a strength-based perspective?

What would be your first goal with the families? The first goal is to understand families needs through communication, to support them in any way possible. Also, establishing a goal to communicate with families can form a general based framework individually to create feedback to support our needs.

What strengths do you see in the two families?

Sam's family: Sam is a young woman that will struggle upon life. Sam has thought her way through disappointment and struggle for herself and children. Sam never stops going to school and she recognized the importance of her education for her future because to communicate with other individuals, to receive help from parenting class and a therapist.

Roberto's family: Roberto and his wife Maria share a work together, supports each other, to provide the multiple variety. It is great that Roberto is taking a secondary language, to help his family understand general things in life.

Country's family: Country is getting her life back, she is following recovery program.

Country decided to continue her education, also she had to attend college as well as become a lawyer. It is great that she still understands, families values and beliefs.

Carlota family: The doctor was able to talk parents about supporting her beliefs, when it comes to someone's health, respect to the career. Mrs. Carlota wanted to plan a fund raise for children in the career with parents help.

Acknowledge families' strengths: Many families have work hard to achieve and overcome complex life experiences. Families want their children, to receive education, ensuring "NO CHILD LEFT BEHIND". Also, families have different values, beliefs, religious, and diversity cultures among ourselves.
