After you have written your explanation, turn this page upside down, and check whether your explanation includes any of the information given below.

A banana is the fruit of a plant, and bananas are eaten all over the world. Bananas grow in clusters on tree-like plants. They are grown in Africa, America, Asia and Australia. A banana is an edible tropical fruit. It is long and yellow when ripe. The seeds are usually just outside the skin and are the pulpy inside, which is eaten when ripe.
