

I organized a fundraising concert for children with cancer last Christmas. Taking advantage of the holiday spirit, I stressed the importance of sharing. For this purpose, I made an appeal to my church and community members to pledge their support to the project. Part of the program was to re-educate children on the essence of gift-giving. Instead of asking for expensive toys, their donations will finance the field trip of the sick to watch the play, Peter Pan, in New York.