

November 1960

Three women (Lila, Gail, and Catherine) joined with their mother and father to organize a college radio station in Canada. Catherine and Gail were more interested in the social aspects of the station than in the technical aspects.

Catherine suggested that they should have a variety of shows — pop, news, comedy, and music. Her mother suggested that they should have a variety of shows for the radio station and that they should have a variety of shows for the radio station.

Catherine did not like being told she should do this and do that. She was a free person. She was a free person. She was a free person. She was a free person.

One day they were asked to make a radio show and Catherine was very nervous. She was very nervous. She was very nervous. She was very nervous.

Catherine did not like being told she should do this and do that. She was a free person. She was a free person. She was a free person. She was a free person.

At the time, the radio station was very popular. It was very popular. It was very popular. It was very popular.

Catherine did not like being told she should do this and do that. She was a free person. She was a free person. She was a free person. She was a free person.

One day they were asked to make a radio show and Catherine was very nervous. She was very nervous. She was very nervous. She was very nervous.

Catherine did not like being told she should do this and do that. She was a free person. She was a free person. She was a free person. She was a free person.

One day they were asked to make a radio show and Catherine was very nervous. She was very nervous. She was very nervous. She was very nervous.

At the time, the radio station was very popular. It was very popular. It was very popular. It was very popular.

Catherine did not like being told she should do this and do that. She was a free person. She was a free person. She was a free person. She was a free person.

One day they were asked to make a radio show and Catherine was very nervous. She was very nervous. She was very nervous. She was very nervous.

At the time, the radio station was very popular. It was very popular. It was very popular. It was very popular.