Visual development, cause and effect, attention span, and language development

Direct your child's attention to the picture and talk about it as you color the picture together. Tell your toddler that the baby in the picture has lost all his bottles. Say, "Let's see if we can help him find the bottles." Encourage your child to point out the bottles in the picture. You can even count them aloud.

Place a familiar object under a towel. Then have your child guess what you have covered up. If necessary, let a bit of the object show.
