

Danny 000001

Greg Hafer

Personal Advanced English Writing

4 October 2012

This could be anyone's title. Think of something more creative.

My English Learning Process

I like how you started broad and narrowed the topic!

I was a bad kid ⁱⁿ on English when I was in ~~my~~ senior high school, ~~at~~ ^{or} even now I still am, ^{only a little} but better. I was born in a small village ^{where} which the economy and the education are not good enough to have English lessons in ~~my~~ primary school. I started to ^{make} set a connection with English with ^{as I grew older} an old age, ^{what do you mean?} older than my ^{are you sure about this word?} contemporaries. So my main ^{reason for} point of learning English at first ~~time~~ was to catch up with my classmates. I was trying so hard but without any effect. ^{These last two sentences set up the conflict well. It makes me want to keep reading.} my English scores were ^{at} in the bottom of my class.

My first big English ~~test~~ was the university entrance test ~~which~~ called Gaokao in Chinese. It's the test not only for English, but also for Chinese, Math, and other courses ^{Give some details about students' reaction to this nightmare.} which related our majors. The third year of every senior high school was a ~~nightmare~~ for all the students who struggle for their ideal university. ^{Tell me why! Be specific.} It is the only way to gain a better life, which is pathetic for the Chinese education. For me, it was a disaster because of my English. I had ^a terrible performance in my demo tests, ^{the} scores were around 70 out of 150, very [?] stable and very shameful. I was about to give up, and I thought I would go to some vocational schools to have ³ 3 years college life, and then be pushed to the society. But I did an excellent ^{on} job ^{my} in the real tests, ^{my} score was ^{up to} over 100, which was the best ^{What do you mean?} one in my English test at that time. ^{Describe how you reacted! I want to FEEL how you felt.}

Attracted by the SPT teaching objective, I ultimately came to Yuexiu to learn English. Yes, SPT, "Successful and Practical Talents," I thought it was a great idea, but after ^I you graduated, ^{I realized} you would think it was just ^{try something else or delete} a decoration of the school, it was just a commercial advertisement for enrolling students. ^{Who in your family? When, where, how?} My family asked me "Are you sure that you go to Talk about yourself. Use "I."