

27. Sacajawea comes home. At last Sacajawea came back to the beloved land of her youth, as she had always been sure she would. One joyful day she was able to introduce Lewis and Clark and the rest of the company to the Shoshone people, and to translate for her people the words of the white men.