MY GARDEN - LATE SPRING 2011 AFTER 6 WEEKS WITH VERY LITTLE

Here's an agapanthus growing amongst the nettles around the compost heap, vivid purple offset by the dusky, stinging green. The rhubarb patch has gone wild ~ uncared for and unearthen, massive rabbit parasols flapping against the crumbling alley wall. A Christmas tree from one or two or maybe three years ago has

MY GARDEN - LATE SPRING 2011 AFTER 6 WEEKS WITH VERY LITTLE RAIN

Here's an agapanthus growing amongst the nettles around the compost heap, vivid purple offset by dusky, stinging green. The rhubarb patch has gone wild ~ uncared for, uneaten; massive rabbit parasols flapping lazily against the crumbling alley wall. A Christmas tree from one or two or maybe three years ago has turned a glorious rusty brown, lying jumbled with grasses and brambles and rogue raspberry bushes, sun glinting from tiny, tarnished tinsel fragments twisted forever between the needles. The
